

THE newspapers of the country, especially of the South, are indulging in a good deal of sentiment over the death of Jeff Davis. The ex-President of the Confederacy is dead to be sure, but we see no occasion for great sorrow or lamentation. He was one of the few unreconstructed rebels, as unrelenting as Lee was misguided, during the long years of conflict between the North and South. His history is not that of a great man. General Lee's memory will long be revered after Davis has been forgotten, for in Lee were the elements of a great soldier. In Judah P. Benjamin, the Southern Secretary of State, was another who had the elements of a great man, but Davis' life was a failure from beginning to end, and we see no occasion for universal grief, now that he is dead. If he had been hung years ago he would have had but his just deserts, but now that he has passed to the silent majority, let him occupy his allotted space in Mother Earth, with his faults buried with him, and be forgotten by a great nation.

WE are constantly reminded that our boasted civilization is capable of deeds of horror that rival savagery. A gang of French and German laborers, brought by contract to South Carolina, were locked up in a jail at Waterboro, in that State, in a room ten by twenty feet, for one entire day and night. The story is one of horror, rivaling that of the Black Hole of Calcutta. The French and German Consuls have telegraphed the facts to the Ministers of their nations at Washington. The poor laborers were arrested for refusing to go to work, and under an armed guard of negroes were escorted to the little jail.

A METHOD of irrigation is now being used successfully in Southwestern Kansas which bids fair to be of interest over large areas. Underlying the prairie is a great lake of water, which is struck at a depth of three feet. Long, deep ditches are dug from which this water flows and is carried for miles, as required. Several of these ditches have been made and the water rushes from them at a wonderful rate. Millions of acres can be thus irrigated.

THE Sacramento Bee says: The entire South is rising up in sections to start funds for the erection of monuments to the memory of the late Jefferson Davis. What a commentary on New York it would be if the arch-traitor of the Rebel cause were to be honored in city after city, while the monument to the guardian angel of the Union army exists only in the windy dreams of Gothamites, who desire all the credit, and want others to put up all the cash!

WE cannot reasonably hope to have any favors shown us by the Administration either in the way of irrigation or on the silver question, and the sooner we gird up our loins to do battle for ourselves, the better off we will be. Let us organize and be prepared to fight for our rights by having a State Board of Trade, then we will have a head to direct the movement and will soon be on the high road to prosperity.

SENATOR STEWART is certainly entitled to the gratitude of the people of the State. He was in his seat at the opening of the session and introduced about twenty bills, many of them looking to the relief of Nevada. The Senator is a hard worker, and will do his share towards bringing the State from under the cloud of depression that has so long hovered over us.

THE Genoa Courier says: Hereafter we propose to charge more for keeping things out of the paper than for putting them in. If the newspapers told half of all they knew, a society revolution would ensue in short order. It is what is kept out of a paper, not what goes in, that keeps the world running smoothly.

THE county officers have been using one quill for the past fifteen years, but it is badly worn and will hardly stand the strain of another campaign.

NEVADA FOR BEEF.

What a Cheyenne Paper Has to say of Nevada as a Feeding Ground.

Our Northern neighbors who drove their cattle to California to feed are disappointed. If they had come to Reno they would have made beef and been better off in the end.—Reno GAZETTE.

The above clipping may seem simply the boasting of one locality over another in the eyes of a casual reader. Not so, however. It contains a truth that is potent to all close observers of the conditions as they exist in California and Nevada. The alfalfa and native hay of the valleys immediately east of the Sierra Nevada mountains, aided by the climate conditions, is the most wonderful fattening substance in the way of forage known in this or any other country.

Three years ago the Live Stock Journal, after an exhaustive investigation and personal examination of the cattle feeding results at Reno, published the results. It was found that a majority of the feeders there, and they are quite numerous, put on an average of two pounds of gain each day during the feeding season, covering the period from November 1st to March and April. This by the use of hay alone—no grain of any kind ever being used.

Just over the mountains, in California, the same treatment and the same feed during the winter months will barely hold cattle from shrinking in weight. Hence, it is a mistake to take best alfalfa to California to feed during the winter season. The dry, bracing air of Nevada gives a continuous appetite, and the hay, as the result of absence of moisture, retains all of its wonderfully nutritious qualities. These two conditions are the reverse of those in California during the months named above, and to the practical feeder readily explains why Nevada beats the world as a hay-feeding country. Oregon ranchmen ought to know better than to pass Reno for a feeding ground.

A SUCCESSFUL ENTERPRISE.

What a Few Ranchers Have Accomplished.

The Inyo, Cal., Independent of the 6th inst. says: Without personal inspection it is not possible for any one to appreciate what a great work the Owens Valley Canal at Bishop is, nor how much has already been done upon it. It is well named the "Owens Valley Canal," for it is in reality the key to the irrigation of the whole west side of the valley. Every reasonable person who will go and examine the work will never again say that the men of Owens Valley have no enterprise. It is amazing that a few poor men should have had the courage to commence such a work, and no better proof could be had of their business capacity than the amount of work already done for the amount of money expended. It is but a question of time when the canal will be extended to Independence and far beyond. Then will tens of thousands of acres of as good land as is in the valley be irrigated, that lie far above any other canals now projected, or even possible to build. But help must be had from outside the county to complete this great work. The interest is so great that upon a fair presentation of facts to capitalists, it is reasonable to expect that money enough could be got to finish the work. There is ample margin for profit to satisfy the greediest investor.

The Verdict Unanimous.

W. D. Sull, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Belleville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half a dollar a bottle, at S. J. FROM SUNNY FRANCE.

What a Paris Paper Has to Say of Nevada and Her Resources.

The GAZETTE in receipt of a copy of Le Gaulois, a paper published in Paris, containing a lengthy article on Nevada's mineral exhibit at the World's Exposition. It says: The State of Nevada, in the extreme west of the United States, is traversed by the railroad from New York to San Francisco.

It is bounded on the north by the Territory of Idaho, on the west by California, on the south by Arizona, and on the east by the State of Utah. The population is not more than a few hundred thousand inhabitants, and the Capital, Carson, has not more than 7,000 people.

But the most important town, as well as the oldest, is Virginia City. This dates from 1850, and owes its existence to the mines. Here are found the ruins of Mr. Mackay, in the lode which bears the name of Comstock.

The mines of Nevada are of unknown wealth. We name the most celebrated districts: Austin, Aurora, Battle Mountain, Belmont, Be-o-wa-we, Candelaria, Churchill, Cornucopia, Douglas, Eureka, Esmeralda, Elko, Golconda, Lander, Lincoln, Lyon, Hawthorn, Humboldt, etc.

All these mines even now yield enormous profits.

But Nevada is not only rich in precious minerals of all sorts.

It also possesses great wealth of animals and vegetables.

Reno is noted as a great market for cattle and is the commercial center of the country.

The air here is the purest in the State and is very favorable to the curing of pulmonary affections, especially asthma.

There are besides, mineral springs excellent for gout and rheumatism.

The mountainous part amid the Sierra Nevada offers the most magnificent views, especially at Lake Tahoe, which is at an altitude of 2,000 meters.

The greater part of Nevada is in direct communication with all the great lines of railways which traverse to-day the North American continent from the Atlantic ocean to the Pacific.

The climate is the mildest in the world. Few tempests, no floods, nor great heat or cold.

There are throughout many valleys, principally in the south of the State, which offer great advantages.

We announce elsewhere the approaching publication of a book on the State of Nevada.

We reproach ourselves and others in France (or, "other French people") for not knowing more of this land.

A SPECIAL RATE.

The Southern Pacific Company Grants a Special Rate to All Who Desire to Attend the Board of Trade Meeting on the 21st.

The following letter explains itself, and the offer should be taken advantage of by all the leading men of the State:

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 7, 1889. Mr. Allen C. Bragg, Secretary of the State Board of Trade, Reno, Nev.—DEAR SIR: Yours of the 4th inst. received. We will make a rate and a third for the round trip from all points on our line in Nevada to Reno and return on the occasion of your meeting at that point on December 21st for the purpose of organizing a State Board of Trade, and will send you certificates for distribution to the delegates, entitling them to the concession.

Full fare must be paid in going to Reno and the receipt of the selling agent taken on the certificate, which latter must be presented to you during the meeting for certification over your signature that the holder has been in actual attendance thereat. When properly filled out as its form requires, and presented to the agent at Reno within forty-eight hours after the close of the meeting, such certificate will be authority for the sale of an unlimited first-class ticket to starting point on our line at one-third of the regular rate. Very respectfully,

T. H. GOODMAN, General Passenger and Ticket Agent.

The press of the State should take pains to let the fact be known that the Southern Pacific Company has granted special rates and make the contemplated movement a success, for it means much to Nevada.

Some New Teachers.

At a meeting of the Reno School Board, held last Saturday, the resignation of Miss Frankie Grippen as the South Side teacher was accepted, to take effect at the end of the holiday vacation.

Miss Adah Lackey, on account of ill health, was granted a six-month vacation, to commence after the holidays, and Misses Cora Somers of Auburn, Cal., and Genevieve Yocum, at present teaching at Laughton's, will fill the above vacancies.

The Building Boom.

If you can judge of the future by the amount of building going on at this season of the year, Reno will have a boom in the spring. Never before in the history of the town was there so many buildings going up as are being constructed at the present time. There have been no less than thirty brick buildings put up since June and twice that number of frames.

Sleighing on the Comstock. Virginia City passengers who arrived on last evening's V. & T. express reported excellent sleighing on the Comstock, about six inches of damp snow having fallen on a frozen foundation, and every sleigh in the city, loaded with hilarious parties was in use.

The Beef Market.

The beef market is soft, owing, no doubt, to the rains in California. If we could get about six feet of snow and it would freeze up, the change in the condition of things would be almost instantaneous.

Xmas presents.

Attention is called to S. J. Hodgkinson's new ad. in to-day's GAZETTE. Those desiring Christmas presents can not do better than pay a visit to his store. If you can't satisfy yourself, then it is of little use for you to look elsewhere.

"I was brought up to respect Sunday, but, damn me, if I have not fallen from grace. Don't follow in my footsteps, young man, don't follow in my footsteps; but go and try to be good, and my word for it, you will get your reward. Give me a bit's worth of liquor."

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION.

Dr. Shady Gives Some Good Advice to Young Beginners.

"And so you want to be a doctor? A laudable ambition. How old are you? Seventeen! A good age to think about adopting a profession. By the time you are thirty-five you may begin to enjoy a lucrative practice. But why do you want to be a doctor? Have you a preference for the studies of that profession?"

"Yes! Good."

"Of course you have already considered the cost that attends the study of such a profession as medicine?"

"Only in part."

"That goes further until you have given it the most serious thought. To pursue a course in medicine costs time, money and many sacrifices."

Thus it was, writes a New York correspondent to the Philadelphia Press, that Dr. George F. Shady met the questions of a young man, having graduated at a public school, had decided to take up the study of medicine. The youth full of that hope, ambition and self-satisfaction that characterizes persons of his years, had gone to Dr. Shady, who is the editor of the Medical Record, for advice. The doctor was just as earnest in his consideration of the case and just as careful as to his advice as when, as the confidential friend, adviser and physician of the late General Ulysses S. Grant, he watched over, cared for and ministered to the needs of that great man.

"Then your advice is to choose some other?"

"Not at all," came the quick reply. "I nor no other man has a right to say to any one, do not take up the study of medicine. Requiring from its votaries the possession of every exalted qualification that can adorn the heart and grace human nature, there is no profession nobler than that of the physician. He may have in his compass on the making of such a practitioner, and a scientist as the world has yet not seen. But I do say begin right. So far as the welfare of the country is concerned it does not need you. There are more doctors or persons holding the degree of M. D. now than can make a decent living. The country, in fact, the world, is overstocked with them. The sober facts show that in the medical profession the market is crowded to overflowing and that the supply far exceeds the demand. While the increase in population is less than that of the increase of doctors is more than five and one-half per cent., and there is but little room left to a considerable percentage of physicians to gain the bare necessities of life."

"Does not medicine afford as many chances for lucrative success now as formerly?" I inquired, for I was a listener to the conversation.

"Not as you understand the word success," said the doctor. "To those who study the art and science of medicine as it should be studied—to the educated, thinking man—the profession is as promising as ever. To those who throw down the blacksmith's tongs at the day and within two years walk out of a medical school licensed to practice a profession as difficult as it is trying, there is but little promise."

"Can as good a medical education be obtained in America as abroad?"

"Quite as good. The medical colleges of this country are beginning to compare very favorably with those of Europe. The schools organized by men who create themselves 'professors' and throw out their bait in the shape of cleverly-written advertisements, just for the sake of the money there is in it, are coming to be valued at their proper worth. Their only desire is to have a large class, for the more students they have the more money they get. In order to effect a good showing they are then desirous of grinding out as many so-called doctors as they can—just like the man with a sausage machine would grind out his links of finely cut meat—all of a pattern, size, shape and kind. It is just here that we need to institute a reform or two. For the good of the profession as well as the safety of the nation, no college of medicine should be allowed to matriculate a man who can not show his B. A., M. A., or some equally weighty degree from some known and reputable college. Then, instead of the tonsing power, the professors becoming the licensing power—each State should have charge of the work. The colleges may send the men forth with the stamp of approval and recommend them for a license, but there should be a State board of medical examiners to say whether they are capable and efficient candidates for diplomas would then be examined without fear or favor. The profession would be elevated to the dignity that it deserves, and the diploma would be far more valuable than it is now that the teaching and licensing powers are one. All this, however, will come some of these days just as will the necessity of a collegiate training and a four years' special course. As a rule, however, the colleges in this country are worthy institutions."

"What do you consider the essential for success?"

"The practice of the healing art is an occupation intrinsically dignified. It can not be degraded by the quality of the humble condition of the practitioner or the lowly sphere of his patient, and yet the doctor should be not only the most cultivated gentleman, but the wisest of men. A physician of genius is the noblest gift which nature can bestow upon humanity. He is the equal of every other noblest gift to society. But to be candid, and to tell you the truth, I think luck has much to do with a man's success. Laying this aside, however, a doctor must be quick to recognize an opportunity. A moment's halt may lose it to him forever. Then he must be honest. Like the father confessor he knows not even that which he does know. He must remember his dignity and always defend it. But next to luck I think one of the best ways to command success will be to collect his bills promptly. Many a doctor loses his money and patients by neglecting to press his claims. This affection of disinterestedness in his dues is altogether wrong. It is a mistake to suppose that a doctor who does not dun his debtors, so to speak, is wealthy, and is making a big thing of his position. I should rather regard it as an evidence that he was either afraid of offending his patient and thus losing him or that he was not sure of his own worth."

UNIQUE RAILROADING. A Conductor Stops His Train to Chase a Real Bad Boy. A young lady who had just returned from a far Southern tour was narrating her experiences away down in Dixie to a Nashville Advertiser reporter. "The funniest thing that happened upon the whole trip," she said, "was while traveling through Alabama. We had just passed a little town in the heart of the cotton district when my attention was called to one end of the coach, where I noticed several passengers standing around a boy about twelve years old, who was yelling vociferously, with his hand poked into one eye. A lady whom I took to be his mother was doing all in her power to quiet him. Between yells he managed to explain the cause of his mishap. He said that he was looking out of the window when a boy, who was standing near the track in a field, as the train was passing, picked up a rock and threw it at him. The stone struck the window-pane, shattering it, and a piece of glass cut a long and painful gash under the young tourist's eye. In a few minutes every passenger in the coach was offering some suggestion and interfering with those who were trying to bind up the wound. The conductor came upon the scene about this time. Upon learning the situation he immediately stopped the train and began backing it to the place where the deed was done. As the train had been going at a rapid rate it was several miles from the scene of the action. The lad who threw the stone was standing near the track with his hands in his pockets, doubtless wondering why the train was coming back, but when the cars stopped within a few feet of him he must have guessed the reason, for he immediately grasped his hat in his hand and started like a race-horse across the muddy fields. In a few minutes all the male passengers on the train were in hot pursuit, and all the females were at the windows watching the chase. Over fences and across fields the little boy and his pursuers ran. Finally a hill hid the race from our view. For nearly half an hour we waited in suspense the result of the chase. The first man to make his appearance was a drummer, who explained that after chasing the young miscreant about a mile, they came to a broad, shallow creek, which the boy plunged through without hesitation, but the passengers, not desirous of getting wet, decided to discontinue the pursuit. It was the most ridiculous thing I ever witnessed. Just imagine about thirty or forty great big grown men running after a twelve-year-old boy just as hard as they could tear. Another half hour was spent in waiting for the scattered passengers to get back to the train, and finally we resumed our journey on South."

Girls, Here's Your Chance.

Mr. William Knox, of Santa Monica, Cal., who has become rich through the boom out there, wants a wife, and sensibly goes to the newspapers to help him. In a letter to the San Francisco Examiner he says that at night he "wouldn't feel so lonesome" if he had some good woman to "kind of cheer him up" a little. "The boom has made me rich," he writes, "but as far as women are concerned, it ain't the same as it was with dirt. There ain't no boom in woman. In fact, it beats the dickens now scarce they are in this glorious land. Any poor girl who may wish for a home in Southern California can have one by addressing to William Knox, who is in want of a wife between the ages of twenty-five and thirty-five years. The first who calls will have the home for life. She will have a good, hard-working man. She will have a good, honest, sober man, and a man that is never seen to go inside a saloon. What more do a woman want?"

THREE GREAT MUSICIANS.

The Cruel Financial Struggles of Beethoven, Schubert and Mozart.

In the cemetery at Währing, a suburb of Vienna, three tombs have long lain close together, inscribed with the names of Beethoven, Schubert and Mozart. The cemetery, says a London Telegraph, now to be destroyed, and not long ago the remains of Beethoven were removed and reinterred with all suitable honor in the central cemetery of the city. The same will be done with Schubert's remains, and his native country will strive by manifestations of its reverence to wipe out the memory of his neglected life and unhonored death. With Mozart it is too late even for this tardy reparation, for his monument covers no tomb, and his body can never be rescued from the pauper's grave in which, to the disgrace of civilization, it was laid. The three musicians are for the most part, sad reading; and the last days of Beethoven, Schubert and Mozart may divide the palm for pathos. All three composers were harassed on their death-beds with money difficulties. Schubert's whole stock of musical manuscripts was valued at $212, and Beethoven was constrained to beg a complimentary concert from the English Philharmonic Society. The hundred pounds, which was the prompt response to his appeal, helped to quicken his end by the grateful emotion it caused. Beethoven's stormy life had a striking close, as was shown by a sudden clap of thunder, with his last strength he opened his eyes and shook his clenched hand at the elements. Schubert, who had the greatest reverence for Beethoven, visited his death-bed, and left, say the historians, deeply moved. In another year, he too, had opened up the struggle, and was lying peacefully in the ground. Beethoven's image haunted his dying visions, and he begged to be buried by the master's side. The story of Mozart's death, rendered almost tragic by the incident of the half-finished requiem, is familiar to all. Three men of almost equal musical genius were thus suffered to die in poverty, and, in the case of two at least, to pass the greater part of their lives in a vain struggle to keep the wolf from the door.

Brought Him Up to Time. "Mr. Sampson," she said, with a blush, "I want to ask what you may think is a very strange question: Do you know if young Mr. Brown is a gentleman of correct habits?" Mr. Sampson grew pale and hemmed and hawed. "Well—um—yes," he said. "I think he is, but O, Miss Smith—Miss Clara—Clara—". A little later he looked down into her eyes and said: "Why did you ask me about Mr. Brown, darling?" "Because I fancy he is becoming interested in a very dear friend of mine," said the girl, unblushingly.

A Web-Footed Young Lady. In a little town in Oregon lives a beautiful young lady nineteen years old, who is web-footed. She wears a small shoe, and except in the matter of webs between her toes, she has a remarkably shapely foot. When a child she was never so happy as when wading in the water, and she is now an expert swimmer.

A Tender Comparison. A cook at a cheap boarding-house in New York played a little game on a grumbling boarder, a newspaper humorist, by serving him with a piece of sole leather instead of beefsteak. "You've changed your butcher, Mrs. Hasche!" said the boarder, looking up at the landlady, after saving two or three minutes on the leather. "Same butcher as usual," replied the boarding mistress, with a patronizing smile. "Why?" "O, nothing much," said the humorist, trying to make an impression on the steak with his knife and fork; "only this piece of meat is the tenderest I have struck in this house for some weeks."

A Preacher Holds the Fort. Rev. J. G. Owens, pastor of a church at Conwil, Wales, was given by his congregation a three months' notice to quit. The time expired one Saturday evening, but the pastor barricaded himself in his pulpit and held the fort all that night and most of the following day. For two hours on Sunday he preached to his congregation while they drowned his words by hymns sung at the top of their voices. At last the preacher marched out of the church with the honors of war, under the protection of the police.

Climate and Complexions. A connoisseur says that the women who live in foggy countries have the finest complexions, and the women who have dry and harsh complexions live in a dry, sunny country. Dampness, it would seem, permeates the flesh, and keeps the skin soft. That is, doubtless, why there are so many clear complexions in England.

A High-Priced Book. The British Museum has bought for £1,500 the splendid prayer-book which belonged to the late Ludwig II. of Bavaria, and which is adorned with copies of the decorations of the famous so-called "great church treasure."
